Response

1. The examiner has an apology while grouping claims; because dependent claims 36-37 are dependent on claim 1 (a correction should be made in these claims' preamble because claim 1 is directed to a device), these claims should be grouped as shown below. To answer the argument on page 3, 4th para. "transmission unit" or "transmission means" is not necessary for "generating an RF transmission". On page 4, last para. the applicants argue about "switchyard operational setting", the examiner submits that only command/control signals are transmitted, not necessary in a switchyard environment (because this is not important). On page 5, 4th para. The applicants argue that "There is absolutely no mention in claim 38 that the claimed apparatus comprises a remote control device or an onboard receiver" the applicants are correct – because of lacking those components, claim 38 has a broader interpretation and falling into a different species (species IV). On page 6, 1st para. applicants request the examiner to retract "an improper statement"; however, current claimed language make pending claims are not patentable.

Election/Restrictions

2. The current examiner respectfully submits that there is a restriction on patentably distinct species from the applicant's claims, as shown below:
- Species I: according to claims 1-10, and claims 20-27, 29, 31, 36-37 these claims are directed to a device to receive signals from a remote controller, without claiming a transmitter (i.e., "a remote on-board receiver" to accept remote signals), US classification 340/825.22.
 - Species II: according to claims 11-19, these claims are directed to a locomotive control device/receiver, US classification 340/825.69, 825.72

Art Unit: 3661

- Species III: according to claims 30, 32-35 these claims are directed to an apparatus for configuring a receiver (of a remote control) according to transmitted command signals, US classification 341/173, 176.
- Species IV: according to claims 28, and 38 these claims are directed to an apparatus including both a locomotive remote controller, a remote control device/transmitter and a on-board receiver, US classification 246/2R

3. According to the examiner's interpretation of pending generic claims, pending claims are not patentable because the applicants claim well-known subject matters.

Furthermore, please consider an example of claiming a remote control (for a TV), or a remote-control receiver, or a whole TV set (with a remote control, and a signal – receiver mounted on a TV - See 806.04(c) for Subcombination Not Generic to Combination

The situation is frequently presented where two different combinations are disclosed, having a subcombination common to each. It is frequently puzzling to determine whether a claim readable on two different combinations is generic thereto. This was recognized in Ex parte Smith, 1888 C.D. 131, 44 O.G.1183 (Comm'r Pat.1888), where it was held that a subcombination was not generic to the different combinations in which it was used. To exemplify, a claim that defines only the subcombination, e.g., the use of a remote control transmitter for locomotive and a receiver on an on-board locomotive to receive that transmitted signal, and an apparatus to transmit signals to a remote control device, is not a generic or genus claim to three different combinations.

Art Unit: 3661

Applicants are required under 35 U.S.C. 121 to elect a single disclosed species for prosecution on the merits to which the claims shall be restricted if no generic claim is finally held to be allowable.

Applicants are advised that a reply to this requirement must include an identification of the species that is elected consonant with this requirement, and a listing of all claims readable thereon, including any claims subsequently added.

Upon the allowance of a generic claim, applicants will be entitled to consideration of claims to additional species which are written in dependent form or otherwise include all the limitations of an allowed generic claim as provided by 37 CFR 1.141. If claims are added after the election, applicants must indicate which are readable upon the elected species. MPEP § 809.02(a).

Should applicants traverse on the ground that the species are not patentably distinct, applicants should submit evidence or identify such evidence now of record showing the species to be obvious variants or clearly admit on the record that this is the case.

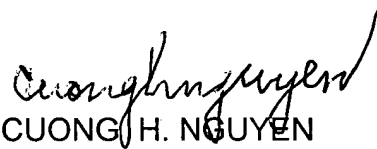

Applicants are advised that the reply to this requirement to be complete must include an election of the invention to be examined even though the requirement be traversed (37 CFR 1.143).

Applicants are reminded that upon the cancellation of claims to a non-elected invention, the inventorship must be amended in compliance with 37 CFR 1.48(b) if one or more of the currently named inventors is no longer an inventor of at least one claim remaining in the application. Any amendment of inventorship must be accompanied by a request under 37 CFR 1.48(b) and by the fee required under 37 CFR 1.17(i).
